YARD PRIZES FOR 1921

amounting to about four hundred dollars were awarded seventy-two of our tenants on the pay day just before Thanksgiving. The premises of all tenants are considered without making special entries and the visits of our yard prize committee during the season occasionally locate conditions which call for attention either by owner or occupant.

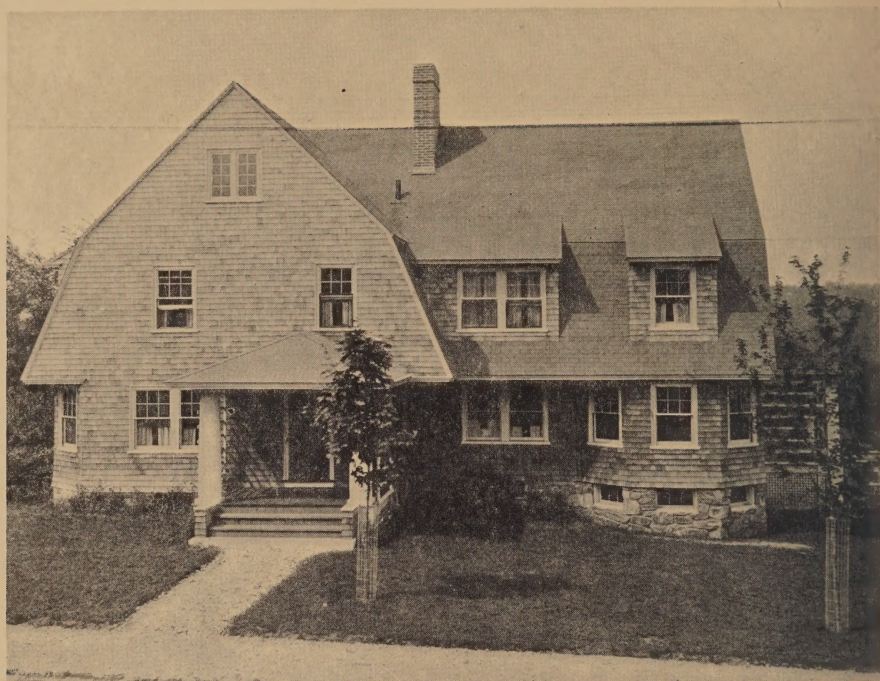

The houses illustrated were nearly all built within the past two years.

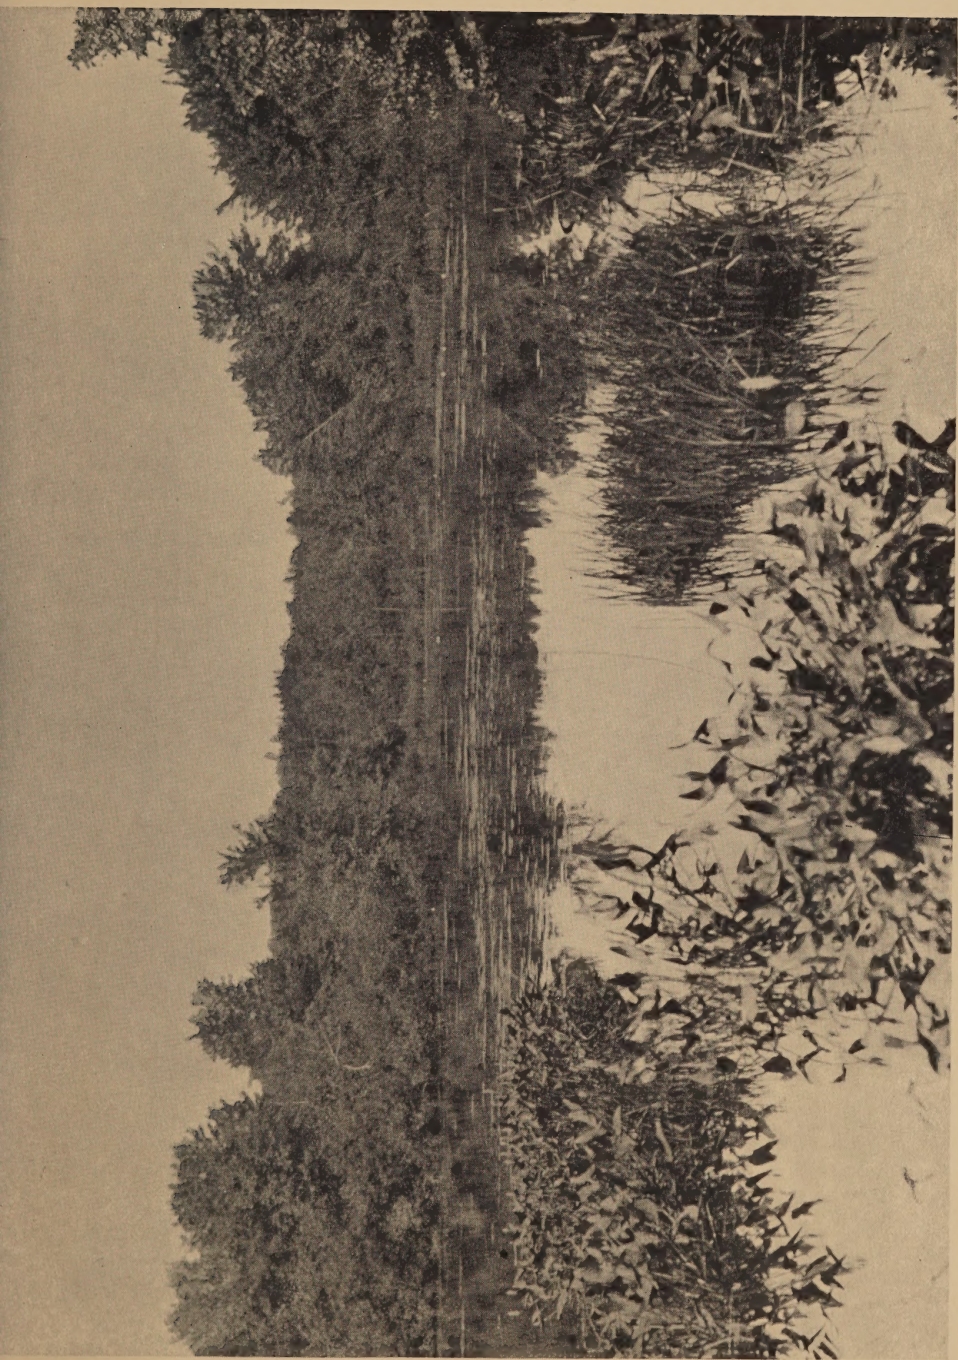

These houses are for two tenants each, with living room, dining room, kitchen, and pantry on first floor; three sleeping rooms and bath room on second floor, and one sleeping room and store room on third floor; all have town water, electric lights, and sewer connection; a large proportion have gas.

We also show attractive views of our local mill pond.

finds the textile mills to a large extent in a period of depression that has had but few bright spots during the year. With increased taxes due to the war, the marking down of valuations and general curtailment, most mills are having a chill that may be compared to the trees of our local village during the ice storm early in December.

Let us have faith however that with the coming months by conservative management and all working together, prosperity may return to textile manufacturing as well as to all other industries of our nation.
